Filmaker(s) name and one paragraph bio:

Roshan Patel, Director & Co-Producer Roshan is a filmmaker based in Bozeman, MT. With a background of community engagement and environmental education, he is now pursuing a Master of Fine Arts in Science and Natural History Filmmaking. He has produced short films for a variety of topics, ranging from lions in western India to the impacts of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill on deep-sea artifacts and ecosystems. His latest film, Pride, screened at festivals around the globe and has won awards, such as "Best Short" at the International Wildlife Film Festival, and "Best Conservation Success Film" at the NY Wild Film Festival. It is also featured on National Geographic's "Short Film Showcase." Roshan is keen on exploring human relationships with our environment, and uses filmmaking as his way to share those stories.

Madison McClintock, Co-Producer Madison has been known to chase mushroom hunters through Montana forests, chat with doomsday preppers and crazy cat ladies, deeply ponder the implications of self-transcendence, and explore many other absurdities for the sake of film. She is particularly interested in how filmmaking can be used as a creative medium to explore the extraordinary ways humans interact with their environments, the strange and beautiful, and how it can help people rediscover their childlike curiosity about the world. Madison is a co-founder/producer at Nestbox Collective and holds a Master of Fine Arts in Science & Natural

Crafting Compelling Proposals

The heart of grantseeking lies in crafting proposals that resonate with funders and clearly articulate the impact of the proposed project. Klein provides step-by-step guidance on developing persuasive narratives, identifying compelling needs, and outlining measurable outcomes. Activists will learn how to present their mission, vision, and activities in a manner that captivates funders and inspires support.

Beyond the technical aspects of grant writing, Klein emphasizes the importance of building strong relationships with funders. The book offers insights on how to identify potential funding partners, engage with them authentically, and nurture lasting connections. By fostering these partnerships, activists can tap into a broader network of support and increase their chances of securing funding.

At its core, "An Activist Guide to Grantseeking" recognizes the power of storytelling. Klein encourages activists to weave compelling narratives into their proposals and presentations, showcasing the transformative impact of their work and the urgent need for support. By incorporating anecdotes, case studies, and personal stories, activists can connect with funders on a human level and demonstrate the tangible benefits of their initiatives.

Klein's guide goes beyond mere theory by providing practical tools and resources for activists to implement immediately. Templates, checklists, and worksheets help aspiring grantees structure their proposals, track their progress, and stay organized throughout the process. Additionally, the book includes case studies and real-world examples, enabling activists to learn from the successes and challenges of others.

"An Activist Guide to Grantseeking" by Kim Klein is an invaluable resource for individuals and organizations working towards social change. Through its accessible and empowering approach, the book equips activists with the knowledge, skills, and mindset to navigate the complexities of grantseeking and secure the funding they need to make a lasting impact. By unlocking the power of grants, activists can accelerate the transformative work they do, amplifying their voices and creating a more just and equitable world.
