The husband, a successful businessman with a seemingly perfect life, claims that he is innocent. He says that his wife was killed by a stranger, and that he has no idea who did it. But the evidence against him is damning. He was seen arguing with his wife on the night of her death, and his fingerprints were found on the murder weapon.

As the trial progresses, the jury is forced to weigh the evidence against the husband's claims of innocence. They must decide whether he is a cold-blooded killer or a victim of circumstance. The outcome of the trial will not only determine the husband's fate, but it will also have a profound impact on the small town where the murder took place.
