Amber was last seen alive at a party in Saint John, New Brunswick. She left the party around 11:30 p.m. and was walking home when she disappeared.

Her body was found the next day in a wooded area near her home. She had been stabbed to death.

The police investigation into Amber's murder has been hampered by a lack of evidence. There are no witnesses to the crime and no murder weapon has ever been found.

Amber's family and friends have never given up hope that her killer will be brought to justice. They have organized search parties, offered rewards, and pleaded with the public for information.

In 2005, the police announced that they were reopening Amber's case.

They said that they had new leads and were hopeful that they could finally solve the crime.

But so far, there have been no arrests. Amber's murder remains unsolved.

Amber's story is a tragic reminder of the many unsolved murders that occur each year. Her family and friends deserve to know who killed her and why. We can only hope that one day, justice will be served.

Theories about Amber's murder

There are many theories about who killed Amber Hunt. Some people believe that she was killed by a stranger, while others believe that she was killed by someone she knew.

One of the most common theories is that Amber was killed by a serial killer. There were several other unsolved murders of young women in the Saint John area at the time of Amber's death. Some people believe that the same person may have killed all of these women.

Another theory is that Amber was killed by someone she knew. This theory is based on the fact that Amber was last seen alive at a party. It is possible that she was killed by someone she met at the party.

The police have not ruled out any of these theories. They are still investigating all of the possible leads in the case.

The impact of Amber's murder

Amber's murder has had a devastating impact on her family and friends. Her parents have never recovered from the loss of their daughter. They have dedicated their lives to finding her killer and getting justice for her.

Amber's friends have also been deeply affected by her death. They have lost a beloved friend and confidante. They have also had to deal with the fear and uncertainty that comes with knowing that her killer is still at large.

Amber's murder has also had a significant impact on the Saint John community. The city has been haunted by the unsolved crime for years. Residents are afraid to let their children go out alone at night. They are also worried that the killer could strike again.

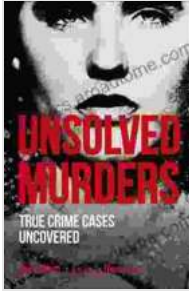

Amber's murder is a tragedy that has touched the lives of many people. Her family and friends deserve to know who killed her and why. We can only hope that one day, justice will be served.
