A Timely and Thought-Provoking Exploration

Atkin's book arrives at a critical moment, as society grapples with rampant misinformation, heightened political divides, and the looming threat of climate change. With clarity and urgency, she exposes the underlying causes of these societal ills, offering a profound understanding of how we came to be where we are today.

Delving into the Climate Crisis

Atkin places the climate crisis at the heart of her analysis, demonstrating how the denial of scientific consensus, the power of corporate interests, and the influence of social media have created a culture of inaction and misinformation. Through compelling case studies, she lays bare the disastrous consequences of our collective failure to address the greatest threat facing humanity.

Exposing the Polarization Trap

Beyond the climate crisis, Atkin explores the rise of political polarization in America and beyond. She dissects the role of gerrymandering, the decline of local journalism, and the rise of echo chambers on social media in fostering a society where civility and compromise have become increasingly rare.

Atkin's analysis delves into the psychological and emotional factors that drive us to seek out confirmation bias and reject opposing viewpoints. She challenges the illusion of "both sidesism," showing how it perpetuates harmful narratives and undermines the pursuit of truth.

A Call for Urgent Action and Renewal

"When Did We Get Like This?" is not merely a diagnosis of our current ills but a clarion call for change. Atkin offers practical solutions and inspiring examples of individuals and organizations working to address the challenges we face. She urges readers to reclaim their agency, reject apathy, and engage in constructive dialogue that seeks common ground.

"When Did We Get Like This?" is an essential read for anyone who cares about the future of our planet and society. It is a powerful reminder that we have the capacity to shape our own destiny, if only we have the courage to confront the uncomfortable truths and work together to create a better world for generations to come.
